

TOWN OF WAKEFIELD — 2004

Wakefield's new Public Safety Building, housing both the Police and Fire Departments, finally came on line in the Spring of 2004 after months of delays. An Open House was held for citizens on February 29, the Fire Department moved in March 31, and the Police Department followed into its new quarters on April 21.

It replaces on the same site between Crescent and Union Streets two buildings, the 1900 Central Fire Station, which was in dangerous condition (the historic hose tower has been retained as a staircase in the new building) and the 1950 Police Station, which was outmoded.

For the first 161 years after the establishment of the town in 1644 it appears only a "bucket brigade" was used for fires but by 1805 the town had its first organized volunteer fire company with a hand-drawn tub, kept in a small building west of the Burying Ground on Church Street. By 1834 a newer hand tub was kept in the basement of the new Town House, and in 1852 the first actual fire station was set up, the Yale No. 1 station on Church Street (this was before the brilliant idea of extending the Common from the triangle south of Church Street through to the shores of Quannapowitt).

The Yale No. 1 station burned in 1859 but was replaced with a brick veneer structure. By 1871 the Washington Hook and Ladder Company operated from Church Street, the Montrose area had a hand tub and Chemical Engine No. 1 was kept in a shed in the downtown business district. When the Town House was moved to the southeast corner of Main and Salem Streets, the Washington and Chemical groups used it.

Fountain Engine Company No. 3 from 1875 on operated from Butler's Stable in the rear of Main Street, opposite Albion. With water mains in operation Greenwood had a volunteer company by 1886.

The present site was first used in 1891 when one of the buildings from Academy Hill was moved to Crescent and Mechanic (now Princess) Streets for the first Central Fire Station and in the next year Greenwood had a building at Oak and Francis Streets.

The famous Hathaway Stable fire of Oct. 23, 1899 destroyed the Central Fire Station. Some 14 months later the new building, which served for over a century, opened. In 1902 the old Greenwood School was modified as a fire station on Oak near Main and is still open.

As far as the Police Department is concerned, special officers were hired as early as 1849, a night watch set up in 1864, and the Wakefield Police Department established in 1871, with cells built in the basement of the new Town Hall.

By 1947 the present site at Crescent and Centre Streets, next to the Fire Station, was selected since there was no longer enough room in the Town Hall, and the Police Station was erected in 1950. The shell of that building is in the new 2004 structure, which meant a substantial saving.

The Building Committee for the structure included Chairman Joseph Bertrand, a Finance Committee member, and retired DPW Director Richard Boutiette, both of whom have worked on the project a dozen years, Selectman John Encarnacao, Joseph Harrington, Betsy Sheeran and L. Murray Young, the two chiefs, former Police Chief Stephen Doherty and Fire Chief David Parr, both where consulted all the way.

For more information on the departmental histories, consider buying Wakefield: 350 Years by the Lake (1994, $40) for articles by L. Murray Young, the Fire Department historian, available at the Daily Item office.
